Project Description

Each year the National Archives host a live, Virtual Genealogy Fair which has been one of the National Archives most popular events. This year the Fair will take place on October 25, 2017. The Fair is hosted via webcast on YouTube with thousands of family genealogists, historians, and researchers participating in the live event. To ensure the success of this event, the Program Coordinator is seeking assistance to provide strategy and support for various aspects of the Fair. Although the Fair is recorded live from our Washington, DC facility, there is a need for virtual support to manage our largest viewer population...online viewers. The objectives of this project include announcing and informing potential audience via social media; providing basic information about the Fair to the public; and building interest/excitement to external audience.
